Move to DITA and stay in style
DITA inPrint solves a key challenge for organizations considering migrating their technical and business documentation to DITA: publishing documents that conform to corporate styles and standards.

What is DITA inPrint?
DITA in Print is a design and publishing tool that makes it easy to create templates that conform to corporate styles. It enables users to easily publish DITA/XML content with those templates to fully styled Microsoft Word and Adobe PDF documents.

How it works
Users design and maintain publishing templates in Apache Open Office™ Writer. There is no programming skill required. If you know how to use the styles feature in Microsoft Word or Adobe FrameMaker, then you can use DITA inPrint. Users then publish their DITA content using the DITA Open Toolkit and their CMS, XML editor, or the application itself.

Hurdles to DITA adoption

Quality and cost of print output

DITA in Print addresses the typical reluctance to adopting DITA due to print quality concerns and the cost of updating or developing new XSLT or XSLFO transforms. Content is the world's window into the enterprise, and high-value content such as product user guides, policies and procedures, and work instructions cannot compromise on appearances and brand alignment. DITA inPrint makes it easy to conform to approved corporate styles and standards.

Publishing to Microsoft Word

Microsoft Word output is still the most common format for distributing, reviewing, and printing corporate documentation. Until now, there was no easy way to publish DITA documents to Word. DITA inPrint is the only tool available for publishing true Word (.doc) output from the DITA Open Toolkit.
